Allied Accord on Application of Experts' Report Should Precede German Negotiations.

MANY QUESTIONS TO BE IRONED OUT

Rumor of Meeting in May Persists Despite Repeated Semi-Official Denials of Plan.

BY JOHN O'BRIEN.

Paris, April 20.—Despite reiterated semi-official denials, it is declared in well informed circles that the British, French and Belgian premiers are likely to meet early in May to discuss a general settlement following the experts' report.

Premier Poincare, it is said, has written a note which he intends to send M. Barthou, president of the reparations commission, in which the premier outlines his views regarding the manner in which recommendations of the experts should be put into effect.

Maintains Approval.

It is understood the note states that the French government maintains its attitude of approval of the experts' program, but recalls that the experts themselves said that several parts of the plan needed to be adjusted and completed by either the reparations commission or the allied governments.

Poincare's note suggests that the reparations commission specify exactly what part of this work they will share, and what part will be shared by the allied and German governments.

He points out that France and Belgium can hardly be asked to exchange actual guarantees for a wider system until after Germany has given tangible proofs that she is willing to cooperate in the working out of the experts' scheme.

Accord Is Important.

Germany, he contends, must do this by collaborating in the gold bank and the railroad plans and by giving effect to bills necessary under the experts' program.

The note declares that the French government thinks it most important that an international accord precede any exchange or guarantee now held.

It is in this fact that observers see the French drift toward support of a project for a premier's meeting.

Zeppelin Motors
Get Long Tests
For Sea FlightSpecially Designed Engines
Roar Sleep Away From German Town.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, April 20.—The hum of the five great motors which have been designed to take the great Zeppelin airship Zik-3 to Lakehurst, N. J., there to be turned over to the United States navy, are keeping Friedrichshafen awake these nights.

The motors, which are the most powerful long-distance Zeppelin drivers ever attempted, have not yet been perfected, it is announced, and it will be some weeks before they are installed in the giant balloon and trial flights begun. The motors, which are of 400 horse-power each, often run day and night in the machine shop near the Zeppelin shed, where Zeppelin officials and mechanics are endeavoring to perfect them so that they will run for 100 hours or more without a stop.

For war purposes motors were designed for 20 to 25-hour trips. With the building of the Zik 3, however, it was realized that there must be perfect driving force capable of making the four-day trip across the Atlantic.

Dr. Hugh Eckener, director of the Zeppelin company, who will pilot the Zik-3 to Lakehurst, said today that he was making no promises, but that he hoped to begin the flight early in June.

"We may be a little late in getting started," said Dr. Eckener, "but we will get there when we do start."

The cheerful lady with the obedient monkey—which made the trip to Atlanta because its rival for its mistress' affection, a dog, was not allowed on the Pullman—is Madame Frances Alda, who will sing the leading role in Flotow's "Marta," the opera which opens Atlanta's Metropolitan season tonight. The gentleman in the center is Beniamino Gigli, who also will sing tonight, being cast in the role of Lionel. Kathleen Howard, on the other side of Gigli, was the third of the stars who formed the vanguard that arrived Sunday. Miss Howard sings the role of Nancy in "Marta."

VICE PRESIDENCY
GAINS IMPORTANCE
IN NATION'S EYESHigh Mortality Rate
Among Presidents Has Been Driven Home in Last Few Years.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Washington, April 20.—Unusual importance is attached to the vice presidential nominations of both parties this year, portending a lively contest over second place at both Cleveland and New York instead of the usual out-and-dried formality rushed through at the tail-end of an exhausted, weary and indifferent convention.

There are two reasons why this honor—which in the past has been handed around as a sop to disappointed factions—has come to be regarded as of genuine importance, second only to the presidential nomination itself.

One is that Warren G. Harding's death has emphasized the high mortality rate of American presidents, which is roughly one out of four. Six of the thirty presidents have died in office. Six have moved into the white house through death of a predecessor.

No Longer a Shelf.

This indicates the risk involved in throwing men who are declining physically into the terrific pressure of the white house. It indicates the wisdom of having a vice president on hand who is of sufficient stature to fill the presidential chair. This has not been the theory in making vice presidential nominations in the past. Most vice presidents have been admittedly inferior to the presidents under whom they served. There have been notable exceptions like Roosevelt and Coolidge, but the rule has been the other way.

The second reason for the importance of the vice presidency this year is the possibility that the election will be thrown into the house of representatives. As the house is now divided, a tedious deadlock would be probable before a majority decision could be reached.

Opens New Possibility.

The constitution provides that the vice president, elected by the senate, shall preside in such cases of failure.

Drunks Attack
Woman, Two Men
In Tourist ParkMotor Cop and Street Car
Motorman Jailed After Assault in Macon Camp.

Macon, Ga., April 20.—Following an invasion of Macon's tourist camp by two drunken men early this morning, and assaults upon two men and a woman, Oscar Williamson, motorcycle officer, and J. L. Stripling, street car motorman, have been placed under arrest charged with felonious assault and drunkenness.

The victims of the assaults were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morrell, of Kankakee, Ill., and B. E. Parker, 82, of St. Lawrence, N. Y., who went to the rescue of the Morrells when he heard their cries for help and saw two men beating them and dragging them from a tent at Central City park. The victims were taken to a hospital. Mrs. Morrell's feet were cut by being dragged on the ground and her head was bruised from blows from a blunt instrument. Parker's scalp was split open and his head bruised. Morrell sustained two lacerations on the head and back.

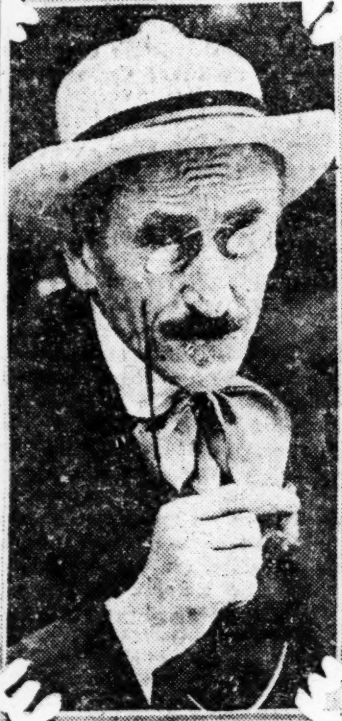

Near Scene of Murder.
The scene of the assault was only a few yards from the point where J. W. Culpepper, Jr., was fatally shot December 20, 1923, and his girl companion criminally assaulted. Robert Hill, negro, being convicted of that crime in Atlanta a few days ago, and given a life term.

The Morrells arrived here late Saturday night from Tampa, Fla., via Tallahassee, and pitched their tent in the tourist camp.

After 1 o'clock this morning they heard two men engaged in an argument near their tent. They told the police, and an instant later two men forced their way into the tent for the purpose, they said, of hunting for liquor. The Morrells resisted the invasion and both were struck down and dragged from the tent, the beating continuing outside.

Scores of tourists routed out by the disturbance stood by and more would interfere except Parker, who was chairman of the police committee of the city council, immediately after the affair was reported.

Williamson and Stripling furnished bond at noon today. The case probably will go to the grand jury, which convenes tomorrow morning.

Chicago, April 20.—Three persons were killed, two seriously injured and one other escaped unhurt early today when a Baltimore & Ohio engine ran wild from a roundhouse and crashed into an automobile more than a mile away. Railroad authorities could not give any reason for the sudden start of the engine. Rumors were reported to police that two small boys were seen running from the engine as it started to move.

The dead: Otto Bowlmark and wife, Olga, and son, Irving, aged 10, who died later in a hospital. Injured: William Lindberg and wife, Anna, 7647 Cornelia avenue, cousins of those killed. Hilda Bowlmark also a cousin, escaped unhurt.

Rue Morgue Murder Sequel
SIX PERSONS BITTEN IN BATTLE WITH MONSTER
Acted Out by Crazy Ape

Kansas City, Mo., April 20.—Six persons are in a hospital here suffering from severe bites and scratches from a crazed ape following the enactment of a sequel to Poe's murders in the Rue Morgue which had all the thrills of the original tale except the fatalities.

The ape was one of several kept by Dr. J. Cunningham for experimental purposes. Escaping from its cage by chewing through the wooden bars, it entered the nearby residence of T. H. Ewing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ewing returned home to find the house in wild disorder. Chairs and tables were broken and strewn about the rooms. A massive table leg was broken squarely in two. Realizing that no person of ordinary strength could have accomplished this, Ewing grabbed the broken leg and proceeded to search the house.

On the kitchen floor, he found a half-consumed pie. Near it were the tracks of bare feet with great toes.

As Ewing gazed, stricken speechless by these strange evidences, Mrs. Ewing caught sight of the ape perched on the mantel. She screamed and her husband attacked the beast.

After a terrific battle, Ewing, aided by neighbors and two patrolmen, overpowered the animal. Both the Ewings were bitten and clawed.

The crazed ape was taken to the police station, where it bit and clawed its way to freedom, this time inflicting painful wounds on four policemen.

Meanwhile, Dr. Cunningham had been called and he finally captured the animal.

George Troup Howard, builder of the magnificent Howard theater and a cotton merchant whose business ramifications extended over two continents, died Sunday morning at the Union Memorial hospital in Baltimore.

The cause of death, according to a telegram received here by C. B. Howard, his brother, was pneumonia, which had set in following an operation last Wednesday.

The body will arrive at Brookwood station at 10:55 o'clock this morning. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Mr. Howard was born in Macon, April 13, 1868. His first prominent connection with the cotton business was when he represented the firm of Duman, Akers & Inman for several years in Bremen, Germany.

Later he opened his own offices in Liverpool, where he maintained two

CASH BONUS BILL WILL BE OFFERED
ON SENATE FLOOR

Democrats Prepare Substitute for Insurance Plan and Will Offer It as Minority Report.

Washington, April 20.—Senate democrats went on record today for a cash insurance bonus bill in a minority report of the finance committee made public by Senator Walsh, Massachusetts, although it was indicated on the floor yesterday the party would support the pending straight insurance bill "to assure enactment into law of a bonus measure."

The report declared such a plan would cost the government about $1,000,000,000 less than the pending bill but if it failed to command support the minority members would vote for the committee measure. Six of the seven democrats of the committee signed it, Senator King, Utah, refusing because he is opposed to any bonus bill.

See Prompt Passage.
Republican leaders today considered the way clear for passage early in the week of the straight insurance bill. Their assurance was based on statements of Senator Robinson, Arkansas, democrat leader, that the democrats feared republicans would vote to sustain a veto by President Coolidge of a cash and insurance measure. Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, and other republican leaders said they would vote to override a presidential veto of the straight insurance plan.

The democratic plan would allow a choice of full cash payment or a 20-year endowment insurance policy, whereas the committee measure would provide for the insurance policies with cash payments only to those veterans not entitled to more than $50 in adjusted service compensation. Both measures would allow compensation on the same basis—$1 a day for home service and $1.25 a day for overseas service, exclusive of the first sixty days.

OPENS VETO ROAD

Washington, April 20.—The position of the administration as a result of the Japanese exclusion legislation has been eased somewhat by the disclaimer of Ambassador Hanihara of any threat in his "grave consequences" note, and the way is clearer for a veto of the immigration bill by President Coolidge.

While the house is apparently largely in favor of definite exclusion by law, many members of the senate announced that they voted for it because of the letter of the Japanese ambassador. The president might be able now, as a result of the recent letter of Hanihara, to marshal enough strength in the senate to prevent passage of the bill over his veto.

House conferees on the bill met Sunday in a preliminary meeting, but took no definite action. Representative Johnson, of Washington, chairman of the immigration committee, said Johnson does not think the explanation

ADVANCE GUARD OF OPERA STARS
ARRIVES SUNDAY

Warm Greetings Given
Frances Alda, Gigli and Kathleen Howard When They Reach Atlanta.

"MARTA" WILL OPEN
BIG SEASON TONIGHT

Billy Guard Welcomed
by Host of Friends.
Trainload of Singers Due
Early Monday Morning.

BY PAUL WARWICK.

Opera will now proceed—for a gorgeous Easter Sunday, in its closing hours of sweet sunshine and brightness, welcomed the first of the Metropolitan singers to Atlanta and cheered them forward to their week of song and celebration, which begins tonight with Flotow's tuneful "Marta."

"Marta" is assured, for Frances Alda, who leads the cast, stepped jauntily from the train at Brookwood station just before 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon and assured those friends who had gathered to meet her that she felt precisely right for giving her best to the Atlanta friends who tonight welcome her back to the city after an absence of five long years.

Beniamino Gigli, hailed as wearer of Caruso's glorious mantle, sings the role of Lionel in the opening. Sunday afternoon he stepped from the train, mounted the stairs, smiled a plenty, posed for a battery of photographers who, peculiarly, hadn't misplaced anything and then wasted exactly $755.43 worth of voice in expressing his personal tenor lament at the banana shortage. But we'll forgive him that since a few seconds later he warbled an Italian rendition of one line from "Hail, hail, the gang's all here"—without the aid of even a snifter of his native Chianti.

Kathleen Howard Here.

A pleasant surprise awaited those who saw the train roll in—that Sunday afternoon train which annually centers more interest and draws more attention from the lavish blooming dogwood in Druid Hills than all the rest of the rattlers that roll during the passage of a year. For Kathleen Howard, another of Atlanta's favorites, was aboard, and is now registered, with Madame Alda, at the Biltmore. She, too, sings in "Marta,"—taking the role of Nancy.

Billy Guard? Of course. That genial soul began pouring forth cordial recognitions and gracious interpretations before the air brakes had been applied, almost, and will continue, ad infinitum.

From the station, Gigli went to the Georgian Terrace and Mesdames Alda and Howard to the Biltmore. Having a perfectly wonderful day to back him up, having produced a veritable masterpiece of weather for Easter and opera, C. F. von Herrmann, forecaster, stood in the spacious Biltmore lobby when the singers entered. Somebody should have given him an ovation; but weather men, like umpires, flappers and guards on a football team, never get the credit they deserve.

All Ready for Tonight.
All will be in readiness when the curtain goes up tonight. There's a train which gets into the terminal station something after daybreak Monday that will absolutely insure that. On that train, packed to the gunwales with nothing but Metropolitan

Says New Method Heals Rupture

Kansas City Doctor's Discovery Makes Truss or Operation Unnecessary

A new discovery which, experts agree, has no equal for curative effects in all rupture cases, is the latest accomplishment of Dr. Andrews, well-known Hernia Specialist of Kansas City, Mo. The extraordinary success of this new method proves that it holds and heals a rupture. It weighs only a few ounces. Has no hard gouging pads, no elastic belt, no leg straps, no steel bands, and is as comfortable as a light garment. It has enabled hundreds of persons to throw away trusses and declare their rupture absolutely healed. Many of these had serious double ruptures, from which they had suffered for years. It is Dr. Andrews' ambition to have every ruptured person enjoy the quick relief, comfort and healing power of his discovery, and he will send it on free trial to any reader of The Constitution who writes him. He wants one person in each neighborhood to whom he can refer. If you wish to be rid of rupture for good, without an operation, take advantage of the doctor's free offer. Write him today.

personnel, will be a small army—the rest of the stars, including Giuseppe de Luca, Paolo Ananiani, Louis d'Angelo, Vincenzo Reschiglian, who sing in "Marta"; the conductors Moranzoni, Bamboschek and Papi; the ballet; the chorus and all the rest of the tremendous force required to stage a successful season of opera, with nothing left out and nothing slurred over in careless and careless manner. That train will clinch the season—and a merry, sleepless crew it is that each year piles off the coaches and submits to a barrage from clicking cameras propelled by insistent photographers.

It looks like a marvelous season. All of Atlanta's favorites will return—Bori, Ponselle, Danise, Scotti, Roth, Martinielli and Chaliapin, the personable Russian whose individuality has come nearer than anything else to filling some of that great void caused by the death of the beloved Caruso. Each year from now on, as Atlanta faces recurrent opera seasons, there will abide that deep regret—that Caruso is no more.

There will be no opera sung, no new triumph registered that will not call to mind the big and jovial figure possessed of that marvelous voice, that stream of pure gold. Whether he be remembered as happy and carefree, strolling the piazza at the Terrazza, or putting all his impassioned heart into the "Lament" from "Pagliacci," there are none who will not remember him and wish, with a sigh, that it had not been so.

Attractive Operas. The list of operas which will be offered this year, too, is thoroughly attractive, in their popularity and promise. All but one have been presented here before—that one, "Fedora," to be presented Friday with Florence Easton in the name role.

After the season has been started with "Marta," "Il Trovatore," an old favorite in any opera season, will be the Tuesday matinee offering, Chaliapin in "Rigoletto" will feature Wednesday night, "Rigoletto" is the Thursday matinee; "Fedora" is sung Friday night; and Saturday the season closes in a veritable burst of glory with "Faust" in the afternoon and a twin bill, with "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" to end the week's musical festivities.

All arrangements for handling the crowds, both as they approach the auditorium and after they have entered, have been completed—the police department, with a staff of special officers, taking care of the outside while an enormous ushering staff will see that seats are rapidly found and occupied. No person will be admitted to the opera after the performance has begun until after the first act. Matinees will begin promptly at 2 o'clock; night performances just as promptly at 8 o'clock.

tion of Hanihara will provoke any material reversal in opinion of the legislation, as the house passed the measure before the Hanihara letter was made public. The conferees, at any rate, can make no change, he pointed out, as both house and senate agreed on the exclusion provision.

Senate and house conferees will meet next Friday to iron out differences in the measure. The most striking difference is that on quota inclusion. The house bill allows relatives and dependents to come in excess of quotas, while the senate bill forbids them, and is regarded as very stringent in this particular.

Churches in Protest.

The Federal Council of Churches has appealed to congress, in a letter to every member of both house and senate, to reconsider its action, and "in cooperation with the executive department of the government to find a more satisfactory method of dealing with the problem."

Suggests New Treaty.

The organization asks that a conference be arranged to find a satisfactory solution, a method that has been suggested also in other quarters. Another was offered is that of a new treaty, providing a mutual "gentlemen's agreement." Sponsors of this idea would have the treaty provide that neither country would give passports to laborers emigrating to the other. Few, if any, Americans go to Japan as laborers, and this would result in a one-way arrangement, which would, however, spare Japan's pride.

It would be more satisfactory to the administration, it is understood, to have no immigration legislation at this time than to write the exclusion provision into the law.

MACDONALD SPEECH SEEN AS SIGNIFICANT.

Paris, April 20.—The speech of the British prime minister, Ramsay MacDonald, before a labor meeting at York, England, yesterday, is regarded here as of great significance and importance in defining the British government's attitude toward the experts' plan. French official circles refuse comment, but the press emphasizes that part of the speech in which the prime minister referred to the ques-

BRADLEY INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION

Thrown from the automobile in which he was riding about 4 o'clock Sunday morning, W. T. Bradley, 19, lies in the Grady hospital under police guard, suffering from a fractured jawbone and a possible fracture of the skull. Surgeons believe he will recover.

The accident in which Bradley was hurt occurred at West Hunter street and Mayson-Turner avenue, and was the result of a collision between his machine and a touring car driven by W. T. Teague, of 401 North Ash street, police were told. Teague had left before arrival of officers.

Patrolmen I. B. Howard and J. R. Pittman, who investigated the collision, became suspicious of the man in which Bradley acted after the accident, and ordered the injured man held pending further investigation.

Bradley gave his address to Desk Lieutenant O. C. Hewell at the station house as 340 West Sixth street. He came to Atlanta from Gainesville, he said.

Two other injuries from auto accidents were recorded at police station Sunday. Victims were Mamie Matthews, address not given, and George Palmero, negro.

The woman was struck down by an auto in North Broad street as she got off a street car between Third and Fourth streets, and the victim, Officer H. R. Smith shows in his report. Palmero was hurt at Peeters and Humphries streets. The driver of the machine didn't stop and Officer O. J. Smith is investigating with a view of making an arrest Monday.

tion of penalties, it being pointed out that this is directly at variance with M. Poincare's attitude up to the present.

The Temps says that Mr. MacDonald's statement justifying the annexation of French troops in the Ruhr not as an instrument of economic exploitation, but as a means of restraint.

"When the British government prefers to abstain from any permanent agreement respecting penalties," adds The Temps, "it is natural that the French government should continue the precautions it has taken." La Liberté says: "The French government's viewpoint on penalties is diametrically opposed. The experts' report did not solve the conflict of ideas, which is likely to lead to difficult negotiations."

The radical Lezair emphasizes the disagreement between Premier MacDonald and Poincare regarding the Ruhr and foresees a sharp controversy on this question.

Le Gaulois says: "France cannot trust Germany's word. To renounce the pledges which she has made, putting ourselves at the mercy of a nation determined to evade its obligations until it feels strong enough to resume war."

branch offices until the time of his death.

Returns to America. After the war he returned to the United States and became one of the directors of the Taylor Cotton company, of Savannah. While he resided in Macon he became interested in motion pictures and built the Howard theater in Atlanta and the Capital theater in Macon.

Mr. Howard was one of the leading war workers in Macon and took great interest in French orphans. It was due to his untiring efforts and energy that the city of Macon raised sums of money for the support of orphans in France. He was also instrumental in adoption of hundreds of French orphans by families in the United States.

During the Spanish-American war, when he resided in Augusta and when service he volunteered individually as a private and after passing through non-commissioned grades he was active service in Cuba.

Educated in Atlanta. He was educated in Atlanta and counted Professor Charles M. Neal, of Kirkwood, now of Athens, well-known pedagogical among one of his instructors and life-long friends.

Mr. Howard is survived by his mother, Mrs. Caroline E. Howard; his widow, who was Miss Eugenie Barnes, of Athens, before her marriage, and three children, Troup Howard, Jr., Liverpool, England; Hampton Howard and Frances Lucille Howard, of Atlanta.

Two brothers, Warren H. Howard and C. B. Howard, prominent business men of Atlanta, also survive him, as well as two sisters, Mrs. Mary H. Matthews and Mrs. Frank R. Logan, of Atlanta.

In addition to being a member of the Masonic order, Mr. Howard belonged to the Methodist church, Piedmont Driving club, Capital City club and Druid Hill club.

In his youth he was considered one of the foremost amateur athletes of the state.

Had Moved to Savannah. At the time of his death he had but minor business interests in Atlanta, having moved away from this city to Savannah two years ago.

The Savannah office is in charge of his partner, Brown Wimberley, of Macon, while the management of the two Liverpool offices is the hands of the well-known English house, the Taylor Cotton company.

Wherever Mr. Howard lived he had a host of friends.

Mrs. Howard is accompanying the body from Baltimore and will arrive in Atlanta Monday. With her is Mrs. Albert Thornton, Jr.

Romantic Career of Father Darkens Daughter's Wedding

DAN HANNA'S DAUGHTER MUST BARE LOVE PACT

BY E. B. MACDONALD. Washington, April 20.—Elizabeth Hanna, beautiful granddaughter of the late Mark Hanna and one of the most popular debutantes of official society, has found the happiness of her approaching marriage suddenly darkened by the shadows of her father's romantic life.

Miss June Avis Evans, an actress, is suing the estate of Elizabeth's father, the late Dan R. Hanna, Cleveland publisher and son of the famous senator, for a permanent allowance of $1,200 a month claiming that shortly before he died, he arranged such an allowance for her in return for her permission to break their marriage engagement.

Her claim is expected to hang chiefly upon the testimony of Miss Hanna. Miss Evans claims that while she was a guest at the home of Hanna shortly before his death, the daughter was present and knew of their arrangement. Miss Evans has obtained a court order requiring her lawyers to question Miss Hanna here.

Miss Hanna is to be married within a few weeks and her wedding will be one of the star events of Washington's social season. About the same time, she will be called upon to bare the intimate details of her father's various matrimonial adventures as she observed them in her home.

She is expected to tell of Miss Evans' visits to the Hanna home in Westchester, New York, where the aging Dan Hanna is said to have courted her and made the alleged arrangement to pay her $1,200 a month if she broke their engagement.

In and order to shatter the case of the pretty plaintiff, lawyers for the Hanna estate will uncover some love secrets of Dan Hanna's past life, in order to show that his alleged affair with Miss Evans was nothing unusual and therefore does not warrant the enormous claims she is bringing against the estate.

Dan Hanna, gay, dashing, understanding, was a heart-breaker of the first magnitude, they will contend. He had many affairs with women. He spent lots of money on them, he loved them, and when he died, he had settled with them all, as was his custom.

First he married Mary Harrington. They had three sons. After the divorce, the first Mrs. Hanna married Edmund K. Stallo and had two daughters.

Then Dan Hanna married Mrs. Walter S. Maud, formerly Daisy Jordan, noted beauty. They had one daughter, Elizabeth, who will be chief witness for the plaintiff in this suit. This Mrs. Hanna, after a divorce, married Frank D. Pelton who had a son by a previous marriage.

The third Mrs. Hanna was Mrs. Frank E. Skelly, formerly Mrs. Stuart, and the ex-wife of a hotel clerk. They had two daughters.

Mrs. Millie C. Hanna, Dan Hanna's wife when he died, was the mother through which the gay son of the famous Ohio senator was revealed to the world. On his death, she declared she never would marry again because "no one could give me the great love he gave me."

PROBE OF TEAPOT ENDS THIS WEEK

Washington, April 20.—After six months of sensational disclosures, the oil investigation will simmer down to its conclusion this week.

The five remaining witnesses are all expected to be heard Wednesday. The committee does not plan to hold any further sessions after this examination, except to question Harry E. Sinclair, lessee of Teapot Dome, if the courts finally decide that he must appear as a result of the contempt case brought by the senate.

When the open investigation is ended, the committee will turn its attention to making a report to the senate, in which it is expected to recommend legislation establishing a definite leasing policy for the government in the future. It also will watch the development of the cases in the courts which have come out of the long-extended inquiry.

The special investigation into the indictment against Senator Wheeler will go forward Monday. Among those expected to appear are Blair Coan, whom Wheeler charged with being an "agent" of the republican national committee sent to Montana to "frame" him; L. V. Beaulieu, "land lawyer" for Gordon Campbell, oil operator who was indicted with the senator, and W. G. Glosser, of Great Falls, Montana.

Senator Brookhart, chairman of the committee investigating the department of justice, intends to hold up the inquiry until the investigation of Wheeler is concluded, though he may call a special session at any time as was done last week, depending upon developments.

FIFTH AVENUE PROM IS RUINED BY RAIN

New York, April 20.—A drizzle, a down-pour of rain, a peek at the sun now and then, more rain and general indications of still more rain—that was Easter Sunday in New York.

Fifth avenue's fashion parade, an annual event, suffered accordingly. A few whose optimism would not be daunted sauntered forth in brilliant head-pieces and other what-nots of feminine apparel, while now and then the ever changing skies and the outpouring of the rain made it difficult to glimpse through the misty air.

That ease and grace of manner supposed to accompany those who join in this annual promenade noticeably was lacking, however. Rather the promenaders kept one eye upon the ever changing skies and the other on the nearest taxicab. The crowds that on sunny Easter fill the top decks of Fifth avenue buses stuck to their apartments and those who did parade had few to watch them.

Despite the weather, churches were well attended. At 7 o'clock this morning 7,000 persons crowded the campus of Columbia university for outdoor services held by the New York Federation of Churches. When rain began to fall, many went inside St. Paul's chapel for the remainder of the services, though many stayed on until Dr. M. L. Robinson, executive secretary of the New York Methodist society, had finished his Easter message.

Ideal Day Given For Celebration Of Easter Sunday

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

In a sunshine that bathed the whole city in a suffused mellow glow, with zephyr breezes rustling through the tree tops and with soft new green the dominating color in parks and green-swards, Atlanta Sunday celebrated Easter under ideal circumstances.

The beneficent weather of the last few weeks had brought out in vivid realism the deeper significance of Easter. Everywhere was the convincing evidence that winter's death had been conquered. Blossoms and bloom, swelling buds and the perfume of a million flowers had come to supplant the bleak skies of winter and the soft carpet in field and forest had covered the bare hard ground over which a few weeks ago the wind was sweeping in gusty blasts.

Dogwood Decorations.

Thousands of Atlantans returned to the city Sunday night their automobiles loaded and decorated with the beautiful white blossoms of the dogwood, filling the streets and the homes with the delicious fragrance of the great out of doors.

While churches were crowded in the mornings and special programs of sacred music filled the places of worship with volumes of sublime melody, the great exodus for outside began practically with break of day, reaching its climax in the afternoon when the streets of the city showed endless caravans of vehicles, from the luxurious limousines to the more humble motor conveyances.

Along the sidewalks was an endless stream of humanity, a kaleidoscopic review of fresh colors, a parade in honor of Madame Fashion; costumes, dresses, frocks, gowns, hats and feathers of the latest Parisian and New York design.

Overhead floated the brilliant colors of the national emblem, decorating the shops and business houses in honor of the week of grand opera.

Atlanta in gala attire. Atlanta at its best in the setting of a quiet and peaceful religious holiday without shouting or gaiety, but with all the earmarks and distinctions of celebration.

And as the endless caravans of glittering motor cars with their crowds of young people wended their way homeward in the dusk of twilight and the shafts of light from automobiles pierced the gathering gloom, one could not refrain from a comparison with hundreds of other cities, where no such serenity, no such evident happiness exists and where there is no such abundance of wealth.

For in all that glorious day the eye could nowhere discern the least vestige of poverty. All seemed happy and prosperous and young. There were no marring effects to embitter the scene.

Easter Sunday to a casual observer showed Atlanta a fortunate city, with the promise of future greatness written not only in the marble of its temples of commerce and its monuments of industry, but on the faces of its own children, the citizens.

Tech Glee Club Concert Declared Best of Years

The Tech Glee and Mandolin club reached the climax of its 1924 season at the Atlanta theater Saturday night in what was universally agreed to be the best performance that a Tech Glee club has ever given.

The performance was notable for a smoothness of action seldom seen in an amateur performance. Each scene slipped easily into that following without the usual embarrassing pause. The performers seemed perfectly at home on the stage, exhibiting none of the customary amateur stiffness.

The first act opened with three numbers by the ensemble. The mandolin club, headed by Bill Spaulding, entertained with several popular melodies, and R. B. Patterson performed on his musical saw. Some of the most delightful melody of the evening was furnished by the popular Yellow Jacket Four, composed of Brown, Lyons, Butler and Kiechik. The scene "Maurice" followed, with Bill Holder and a chorus of 16. Bert MacIntyre and Ben Hume were highly amusing in their clever scene of patter and song. "Midnight Rose," sung by Charlie Lyons, impersonated by Tom McCarroll and assisted by large chorus, was very effectively done, a dance by the two leading characters ending the scene. The saxophone quartet was one of the most popular numbers of the performance, judging by the number of encores demanded. Act one ended with two numbers by George Butler and the ensemble.

During the intermission, Charlie Lyons, the president and director of the club, presented a large bouquet of roses to Miss Ada Peoples, the sponsor of the Glee club this year.

"The Members of 1924," who opened act two, were enthusiastically received. This excellent orchestra is led by Ed Thompson and Bishop Foreman. The audience was reluctant to have them conclude their act, calling them back for encore after encore.

Lionel Levy entertained with his clever drawings in scene two of the second act. Levy concluded his act by drawing a sketch of the sponsor, Miss Peoples, from where she sat in the Chi Psi box. "Pretty Peggy," with Lyons, Holder, and a chorus, was well received. The imitable Bert MacIntyre starred in "So This is Venice," ably assisted by C. J. Turner and a chorus in picturesque costume. A feature of this scene was "La Paloma," sung by Jeff Kidd and interpreted in dancing by Tom McCarroll and G. W. Wynn. T. G. Reddy, in negro make-up and costume, sang several popular negro dialect songs. The entire company assembled for the finale, singing the Alma Mater song and two other numbers.

The fraternities were well represented in the audience, each of them having entire rows in which they and their guests were seated. Two boxes were occupied by the Chi Psi and the cents a plate and reservations should be made by telephoning Mrs. W. A. Arnold, Ivy 6549.

Dr. Fairlie is a native of Glasgow, Scotland, but came to this country at an early age, and received most of his education in the United States. He is a graduate of Harvard (A. B. 1885; A. M. 1886) and received his Ph. D. at Columbia university in 1898. He was assistant professor of administrative law at the University of Michigan from 1900-04 and junior professor from 1904-09. In the latter year he was appointed associate professor of political science at the University of Illinois, and in 1911, professor of political science. He has continued to fill this chair at the University ever since.

He was a member of the Michigan constitutional convention, 1907-08, and director of the Illinois efficiency and economy committee, 1913-15. Since 1916, he has been continuously managing editor of the American Political Science Review.

He is the author of a number of works pertaining to the government of states and their subdivisions, and related subjects. Among these may be mentioned "Municipal Administration" (1901); "National Administration of the United States" (1905); "Local Government in Counties, Towns and Villages" (1906); "Taxation and Revenue System of Illinois" (1910); "Town and County Government in Illinois" (1913); "Revenue and Finance Administration" (1915); "British War Administration" (1919).

Brotherhood Meet To Decide Stand On Politics, Stone

Cleveland, April 20.—The political attitude of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers will be settled by delegates to the "brotherhood's" triennial convention which begins in this city June 5, and continues for several weeks. Warren S. Stone, president, said today.

"The delegates will await outcome of the conventions of the two major political parties before taking any action," Mr. Stone said.

His statement was occasioned by publication of the statement that the brotherhood had expressed preference for a certain presidential aspirant.

VICE PRESIDENCY GAINS IMPORTANCE

by the house to elect a president. So there is this chance that one of the vice presidential candidates now to be nominated may preside for a time at the white house.

In these circumstances are to be found the reason for the prominence with which the name of Charles G. Dawes has been received in republican circles. There is a strong probability that if the convention were held today he would be the republican vice presidential nominee. He distinguished himself in establishing the budget system under Harding here three years ago. Now he has distinguished himself in devising a reparations settlement which has brought harmony in Europe after five years of wrangling.

Is Politically Available?

In addition to these evidences of ability, he has the requisite elements of political availability. Pershing picked him to be chief purchasing agent of the A. E. F., and after the war he was active in organizing the American Legion. Furthermore, he comes from Illinois, and the republicans want the middle west to be represented on the ticket. The chief opposition might be expected from progressives desiring a man of more insurgent temperament. On the other hand, Dawes has a magnetic, straightforward, breezy personality which would make him a popular candidate in the west, even though he has not been identified with the insurgent faction or with the agrarian movement. Governor Hyde, of Missouri, and Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, have been mentioned also.

The democrats are so completely engrossed in their presidential contest that the vice presidential nomination has not yet been given so much attention. Senator Copeland, of New York, is regarded as a possibility as is Governor Silzer, of New Jersey. Mayor Dever, of Chicago, is another.

CASH BONUS BILL WILL BE OFFERED

the report said, through issuance of $1,500,000,000 additional bonds under the second Liberty loan act. Support of the American Legion was given yesterday to the measure, insurance proposition, Commander

Quinn declaring in a message to senators that the democratic substitute would endanger enactment of any bill since it could not be passed over a presidential veto. The declaration was based on a careful poll of the senate, Commander Quinn said.

Explaining the purpose of the substitute, the minority report declared.

Explanation of Substitute.

"An adjusted compensation bill is not to give the soldiers an increase in compensation because of the dangerous and hazardous service."

"no one wants or could be sufficiently paid for this. It is to give the soldiers who offered their lives with their service in the late war a compensation that will more nearly approach that which was paid the lowest paid common laborer who remained at home, secure from the dangers of war, and whose compensation was increased from 100 per cent to 300 per cent. It is to meet in part the economic loss that absence from home and opportunities for participating in the financial gains made by those at home, caused those in the service."

"During the world war we paid our soldiers $30 per month; or $1 per day. At the time the government was paying its soldiers in camps $1 per day and overseas $1.10 per day, it paid its employees working in its navy yards, living at home, in comfortable circumstances, convenience and safety, from $6 to $12 per day; in its arsenals from $6 to $10 per day. On its one per cent plus contracts from $5 to $12 per day. To its over 500,000 civil service employees, receiving $2,500 per year or less it has paid each a bonus of $240 per year for the last five years in addition to their regular salary, or a total sum of $1,200 each.

Home Employees Got Bonus.

This is what the government itself did in the payment of wages and bonuses to its employees who remained at home. We do not believe it was fair for the government to pay the men at home $12 per day for working on its ships and to pay the men fighting on the ships only $1.10 per day. We do not believe employees in its arsenals should have received $10 per day and the men on the battlefield be limited to $1.10 per day.

"The high wages at home were not only paid by the government, but in the channels of trade in the business world as well. Bricklayers, masons, plumbers, carpenters, for eight hours work, received from $8 to $14 per day. Common labor in all its various forms, including labor on the farm, was paid from $4 to $6 per day.

"It is true the soldier received his clothes and board in addition to his wage, but that advantage was largely neutralized by the unusual requirements compelling him to deduct so much for insurance. The business world pays for the insurance of its employees. The government required the soldiers to pay for the insurance to protect themselves and their families against dangers into which we sent them. From the $30 per month they received also was deducted the $15 which the soldier was required to send back to his dependents. In addition to the cost of his insurance, leaving him a balance of from $7 to $9 per month with which to pay his sundry expenses.

As New Born Babies.

"When he received the $60 payment on his return home to begin life anew he was without sufficient money at the then existing prices to purchase the necessary civilian employment to earn even a competency. Stripped of everything he had material and prospective, he was required to make new arrangements and incur new obligations to enter again into the industrial world from whence he had been so arbitrarily taken.

"In the light of the economic prosperity of the country during the war, we believe justice requires that an adjustment of the soldiers' compensation be made which would not have been necessary or justified had the economic conditions at home been bad."

Ottley To Quit as Federal Reserve Bank Director, Not As Fourth National President

Through errors in headlines and the transcription of its first paragraph, a story appearing in The Constitution Sunday stated that John K. Ottley would not be a candidate for reelection to the presidency of the Fourth National bank when it should have said that he would not offer for reelection as a member of the directorate of the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta upon the expiration of his term as reserve bank director.

While a reading of the whole article would have cleared up any misapprehension, this explicit correction is made by The Constitution in order to avoid any possible confusion.

There could hardly be a register possibility than that of a severance of Mr. Ottley's connection with the Fourth National bank, with which he has been conspicuously identified since its establishment in 1850, and the presidency of which he has filled with marked distinction and ability for several years past.

The Constitution's story of Sunday gave Mr. Ottley's reasons for retiring from the directorate of the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta and, in turn, the expiration of the erroneous first paragraph, was as follows:

"Mr. Ottley has been elected without opposition and while expressing appreciation of the honor, he has let it be known that since the federal reserve system is a bank-owned institution, he believes that the principle of rotation in office should be applied.

"His tenure in office has embraced one of the most trying periods in the financial history of the south. Immediately after the war and in the second year of his first term, the deflation period set in. In the trying days of 1919-20 Mr. Ottley devoted himself entirely to problems of the federal reserve bank, and his credit judgment was employed in a way calculated to help member banks which were in need of assistance.

"In the latter part of his tenure in office he worked in full accord with the bank's official policy. These forces averted many calamities and contributed to the permanent welfare of the financial interests of the sixth federal reserve district. It is pointed out.

Long Service Period.
"Mr. Ottley's name is engraved on the cornerstone of the Federal Reserve Bank building, in the erection of which he was an important factor, serving as a member of the building committee, other members being J. A. McCarty and W. H. Kettig from the directorate, and Governor M. R. Wellborn and Chairman Joseph A. McCord from the official staff. On this committee there was no harder working man than Mr. Ottley, and to their credit these stands in Atlanta, one of the landmarks of the city, is the entire federal reserve system, and one which was erected at a lower cost than any of the contemporary structures, according to officials.

"Another conspicuous feature of Mr. Ottley's service has been the part he played in the perfection of the institution's internal organization, which was pumped from a baby to a giant during the war period. Systematizing this army of employees and their multitudinous duties was a task calling for the highest order of ability and insight, and the way the bank is running today, without a hitch or wobble.

career and brought him national recognition in banking circles; the fact of his residence in Atlanta, the home city of the sixth district bank, has given him an opportunity which he was quick to seize to keep in unusually close touch with the institution's affairs.

Waged Cuban Battle.
"An outstanding feature of his service was the fight Mr. Ottley led in the controversy with reference to the Cuban branch which the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston endeavored to establish, and which he felt would prejudice the interests of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta. The result was that the rights of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta and the interest of the sixth district were thoroughly protected.

"Mr. Ottley's present term will expire in December, and a successor will be chosen in the meantime by the Class A, Group I, members of the system in this district, this being the group which Mr. Ottley has represented on the board.

DYER'S SUCCESSOR TO BE NAMED TODAY
Members of council Sunday were divided over the probable effect in Saturday night mass meeting in West End would have an election by council today of a new member to succeed Councilman Arthur Dyer, deceased.

Supporters of W. M. Rogers were said to have notified by phone each member of council during the day of the action taken by the meeting, which named a delegation to champion Rogers' candidacy on the floor of council this afternoon.

Supporters of Wiley L. Moore, the other leading candidate, were equally active in polling the members of the body who have not committed themselves publicly. Mr. Moore issued a statement Sunday night in which he declared that he was confident the meeting would not hurt his chances for election.

"I have been assured that the majority of the members of council are not deceived by the efforts of 50 of my opponent's friends to set themselves up as the voice of the seventh ward," Mr. Moore's statement declared.

"Although I accepted an invitation to speak at the meeting, I was aware that it was a Rogers rally rather than a representative meeting, and I did not make any effort to get my own friends to attend. The actual count on the resolution of endorsement was 56 votes for Mr. Rogers and 29 votes for me," Mr. Moore said.

"There are 4,000 registered voters in the seventh ward, 1,700 of whom voted at the last election. A majority of voters two years ago said that they did not want Mr. Rogers to represent them when he made his unsuccessful race against Mr. Dyer."

COOKING INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN NEGRO WOMEN
Urban League Opportunity school has secured an agreement from the officials of the Berry Cooking school to operate for the benefit of the colored women of the city.

Thursday and Friday afternoons demonstrations will be given at the Rush Memorial church under the auspices of the Neighborhood union.

All of the material and other equipment will be furnished by the Berry school. It is hoped that a large number of colored women will take advantage of this unusual opportunity. Thousands of white women of the city took advantage of the demonstrations given during the past weeks at the Baptist tabernacle.

OUR OWN LOST AND FOUND DEPARTMENT.

Christopher Moore.—Will you kindly give me the rest of the poem starting:

Into each life some rain must fall.
Dear Chris: We hate to dampen anybody's spirits with cloudy stuff like this, but here you are. Into each life some rain must fall: So curses on the pokers, dern 'em! Who borrow our umbrellas and forget serenely to return 'em.

George Peck.—There's a verse about "little drops of water and little drops of sand" running through my head. Do you know what it is?

Dear George: It sounds like softening of the brain but here's the verse: Little drops of water, little grains of sand, Make the mighty ocean and the ditto land.

But why these drops of water and little grains of sand? Mr. B.: Always served with spinach I cannot say off-hand.

WALLACE INQUEST WILL BE HELD TODAY
Inquest into the death Saturday night of W. A. Wallace, 43, of 500 Bullman street, who doctors at Grady hospital believe died from the effects of bad liquor or from poison, will be held this morning, according to Coroner Paul Donegan.

The inquest will be held in the parlors of the Hunter & Blanchard company, on Ivy street, which will have charge of funeral arrangements, and results of which have not been completed.

Wallace died about 8 o'clock Saturday night in his room at the home. His wife told detectives that shortly after 4 o'clock Saturday evening she had summoned the ambulance and begged the surgeons to take her husband to the hospital, but that he had declined, saying his condition was serious and that he had only been drinking a little liquor.

NEGRO CONFERENCES HOLD FINAL SESSIONS
The west Atlanta, Griffin and Monticello district conference of the African Methodist Episcopal church closed a four-days' session Sunday afternoon with a large attendance.

Revs. L. A. Townsend, H. D. Canady and John Harmon, presiding elders of the conferences made their closing addresses paying tribute to the large number of members added to the districts, and urged the ministers to establish good churches and schools in rural districts which would lessen the number of people leaving the country and coming to the cities for better opportunities.

The Griffin conference convened Wednesday in Monroe at the Methodist A. M. E. church. Splendid preparations were made for the conference by Rev. G. T. Spivey, the pastor and members.

Rev. S. H. Kime was elected secretary. All pastors made itemized reports. The conference endorsed the return of Bishop J. S. Flipper for another term, and also Dr. J. A. Hair for missionary secretary, and Dr. C. A. Wingfield for the review. The conference pledged its support to Morris Brown university.

Professor B. R. Holmes, of the Holmes institute, spoke in favor of industrial education and urged the people to stay in the south. Dr. H. D. Canady, who presided, is held in high esteem by the pastors, delegates and members of the district.

Sermons were preached by Revs. S. H. Kime, J. W. Lammie, S. P. Prince, E. J. Johnson, S. W. Peacock, R. J. Arnold and others.

The conference passed resolutions praising The Constitution for its fair deal to the negro race.

C. H. TOBIAS SPEAKS TO LARGE AUDIENCE
A large audience was present Sunday to hear the address of Rev. C. H. Tobias, senior international secretary of the Y. M. C. A. for colored men and boys, at the colored branch of the association. He said that man has an aspiration and longing for something that the word can not fill. With all the knowledge and scientific discoveries of this earth, he is still restless and calls for something that can only be satisfied with the spirit of Christ, the speaker stated.

At the close of the address Dr. A. M. Wilkins made an appeal for the annual membership campaign which begins the first of the month. All those present expressed themselves as willing to take part in the campaign to help make Atlanta first in the country not only in membership enrollment but in every phase of a modern association.

MRS. JENNIE SMITH DIES IN GRANVILLE
Funeral services for Mrs. Jennie Smith, of Granville, who died at the residence after a few days' illness, will be held in Granville at 3 o'clock this afternoon. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Tommie Cower, and Mrs. Cora White, both of Granville, and a brother, W. B. Smith, of Atlanta.

FAREWELL LUNCHEON GIVEN TO HOTEL MEN

The 100 prominent eastern hotel men who came to Atlanta on a special train Friday to attend the opening here of the Atlanta-Baltimore hotel were guests at a farewell luncheon given by Carling J. Dinkler in the new dining room of the Ansley hotel before departure of their train for New York at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The limited time permitted by train schedules restricted the program for the affair principally to disposing of the elaborate variety of conestibles prepared for the occasion by the Ansley's chef.

F. J. Paxson, who had presided as toastmaster at the Baltimore opening Saturday, served in the same capacity at the luncheon and introduced the host, who is proprietor of the Piedmont, Ansley and Kimball hotels in Atlanta and others in the south.

James P. DeJarnette, manager of the Cecil hotel; Holland B. Jenkins, manager of the Biltmore; John McEntee Bowman, lessee of the Biltmore and other prominent hotel men of Atlanta, who made short talks.

Jake F. Mathieson's Lyric theater orchestra played during the dinner. The rose and gold dining room was converted into an Easter garden of lilies, carnations, and other cut flowers and banks of palms and ferns. The menu was said by visiting hotel men to be the most elaborate ever prepared for a mid-day meal in the south.

SPARTA INAUGURATES DRIVE AGAINST RATS
Sparta, Ga., April 20.—(Special.) County Agent S. D. Truitt announces that he will inaugurate a "rat killing campaign" in the next few weeks. The rodents have become so numerous that much damage is being done to all kinds of foodstuffs. Many of them are large wharf rats that will soon destroy a whole brood of young chickens. The agent intends to put on an intensive campaign, and will no doubt get the full cooperation of all the citizens of the town.

32,000 Feet Floor Space.
The addition to the new store, formerly the Vaudeville theater, will give the High company a total of 32,000 square feet of ground floor space, a larger area than that of any other department store in the city, it is said. The area of the new store is 5,000 square feet. The addition is being constructed on the Italian Renaissance style of architecture, and all the fittings and decorations are being chosen to harmonize with this plan. It will provide a perfect background for the display of the silk goods and will be a most delightful place in which customers may respect the goods at their leisure and view them under the most favorable surroundings.

The company is spending $50,000, all told, on new fixtures for the store, some of which have already been installed in the main section, now occupied.

Another addition to the facilities for service of this popular Atlanta retail institution, is the Tea Room, which was recently opened and which has proven immediately successful.

This room occupies a floor space of 4,000 square feet on the main floor in the rear of the main store.

Enlargement Necessary.
Mr. Brittain stated that the enlargements to the store have been made absolutely necessary by the tremendous growth in the firm's business. On a basis of large volume and small profits, their turnover has more than doubled in the five years since they opened their present store, moving there from across the street, where they formerly occupied the building now used by the McClure Ten Cent store.

It is the policy of the store to sell nothing but first quality goods. No seconds or doubtful goods are allowed in their stocks and to this, largely, the rapid growth of the business is attributed by Mr. Brittain.

The opening of the new "silk shop," an event marking something distinctly new for Atlanta shoppers, will be about May 1. At that time, special opening day ceremonies will be staged, full announcement of which will be made beforehand. The slogan of the new wing of the store will be, says Mr. Brittain, "America's finest silks in the South's finest silk shop."

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG TO RECOVER, IS CLAIM
Fort Wayne, Ind., April 20.—Clara Kimball Young, actress, who underwent an operation in a local hospital late last night, for the removal of an abdominal tumor, was resting easily tonight and her ultimate recovery is looked for, according to Dr. B. T. Weaver, her physician. Dr. Weaver said Miss Young rallied "splendidly" from the effects of the anaesthetic and regained complete consciousness early this morning. Her condition, however, he said, was still serious and it will be a month before she will be able to leave the hospital for her home in Los Angeles, California.

Miss Young was stricken suddenly on the stage of a local theater Tuesday night. The operation was decided on after she suffered a relapse late yesterday afternoon.

Plane of Martin Ready for Jump To Dutch Harbor
Pearl Creek Dome, Kanakak, April 20.—Major Frederick L. Martin, commander of the United States army around-the-world air squadron, who was forced down here en route to Chuknik from Seward, Alaska, Tuesday, will start for Dutch Harbor, Unalaska Island, Monday morning to rejoin his three companions. If weather conditions are favorable, he announced tonight.

Exceptional speed was made today under trying conditions by Major Martin, his mechanic, Sergeant Alva Harvey, and a few natives on the replacement of the motor in the plane Seattle.

The engine arrived early today on the United States coast guard cutter Algonquin from Dutch Harbor, 520 miles south of Seattle. The vessel steamed at top speed all night.

MRS. JENNIE SMITH DIES IN GRANVILLE
Funeral services for Mrs. Jennie Smith, of Granville, who died at the residence after a few days' illness, will be held in Granville at 3 o'clock this afternoon. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Tommie Cower, and Mrs. Cora White, both of Granville, and a brother, W. B. Smith, of Atlanta.

Exclusive "Silk Shop" Is New Idea in Department Stores

Something new in department store ideas for Atlanta and the south will be inaugurated shortly by J. M. High and company, one of the group of great department stores which have made this city famous in retail merchandising circles the country over.

This new departure is the establishment of an exclusive "silk shop," where nothing except silk dress goods and dress trimmings will be handled. It will be located in the new addition to the High store, the property formerly occupied by the Vaudeville theater, and now being transformed into one of the most artistic and convenient departments in the country.

W. H. Brittain, general manager of the High store, returned from New York and the east, last week, together with a group of buyers for the store. Early this week the company will announce a great spring sale which will place on sale, for the women of Atlanta, $100,000 of merchandise silks bought at prices the lowest known in years—low prices which will be passed on to the store's customers, says Mr. Brittain.

In explaining the circumstances which allow for this, Mr. Brittain said that it happened that the group of buyers, which the new "silk shop" for Atlanta will be opened with a stock of merchandise priced at figures which are absolutely unprecedented in the history of retailing.

The addition to the new store, formerly the Vaudeville theater, will give the High company a total of 32,000 square feet of ground floor space, a larger area than that of any other department store in the city, it is said. The area of the new store is 5,000 square feet. ## Austin Brothers Bridge Co. Gets Big Steel Contracts

Very few people realize the wonderful amount of construction work that is done by the Austin Brothers Bridge company annually all over the south.

At their large plant at Lee and Mickleberry streets, opposite Fort McPherson, they have nearly 100 men and the latest equipment and facilities enabling them to quickly get out everything in structural steel. Angles, beams, columns, channels, plates and the supporting rods suitable for all purposes, is carried in stock, and an efficient corps of designers can quickly help you to solve your building problems, no matter how large or small the job may be.

At the present time this firm is erecting the steel work for a large building for the Atlantic Coast Line in Montgomery, Ala., and 400 tons of material are being gotten out for some very large dock sheds that are being built by the city of Charleston at the water front in that city.

Contracts have been signed for a large bridge across the St. John's river in Orange county, Florida, and also for two to three bridges across the Indian river in the same state, one at Fort Pierce and the other at New Smyrna.

This firm is also going to build a three-span steel bridge across the Tugaloo river connecting Stephens county, Georgia, and Oconee county, South Carolina.

The building of this particular bridge is of special interest to Atlanta and north Georgia people, as it is being built on the old road-bed of the Southern railroad and will shorten the distance between Toccoa, Ga., and Westminster, South Carolina. The building of this bridge at this particular point will greatly stimulate travel between western South Carolina and Atlanta, as many miles of the old railroad right of way with its nearly level road bed can be traveled on.

The officials of the Austin Brothers Bridge company are very well pleased with the building outlook in the south, and J. K. Barcroft, vice president, stated that the large erecting force out in the field and the shop and office men were all busy as bees and that the prospects were that they would do even a bigger business this year than they did last year, which in itself was very good.

The Honorable Mr. Bing

BY HORATIO LANKFORD KING

"I didn't," said Rosa.

"Well, then," exclaimed Ruth, "you're a liar, Katy did."

"Rosa did," said Mr. Bing.

"The little Katy did?"

"Is it possible, Beverly, you don't believe us?" asked Rosa, trying to look offended.

"What's the contention, anyway?" asked the puzzled Ruth.

"I know how we can settle it," added Rosa.

"How?" asked Ruth.

"You call up Mrs. LeConte, Ruth, and ask her. She'll be sure to know who wrote 'The Lipping Widow'."

So Ruth called up Mrs. LeConte.

"Elna," Mr. Bing plainly heard her ask over the wire after getting her number, "do you know who wrote that late popular song, 'The Lipping Widow'?"

And was it sung on Broadway? And just as plainly Mr. Bing heard Elna say, "Why, yes. That funny Al Summers wrote it and sang it too. I have a copy of it."

"Who published it?" asked Ruth.

"Deley Love Publishing company," said Elna.

"I like—Why, Ruth? Oh, nothing. I'll see you later," and Ruth hung up the telephone receiver.

"Collusion," said Mr. Bing, and moved towards the door. Then he was embarrassed and very apologetic.

"Rosa, I think I'll be going. I don't know really why I should have objected to your song. I apologize to you also, Miss LeConte."

"You haven't told me more about your books and the publishers," said Rosa, going to the door with him, Miss LeConte nowhere in sight. "I am fearfully interested. Beverly, I thought, I've always been in your world."

"Oh, they don't want my manuscripts," was his answer, but liking the friendly note in her voice. In fact, it was her unusual friendliness that made him feel very little and insignificant all of a sudden. He didn't deserve it. "No, I don't want more of them than I do of myself this minute," and he also found himself in the sweetest of moods.

He was almost ready to say to her, "I am sure you do not want me to agree with you."

"Only my combs, if I don't!" Sometimes I suspect I am a stupid sort of person, Rosa.

"Why?"

"Well, I mean I sometimes suspect that when I talk with you. You have a way of drawing me in. A lot of personal ideas of mine are important, and I am left with a comb. Quite helpless, yes. Other I can laugh at, decide; but not you. Instead, I am wondering if you are not laughing at me. I should hate to lose credit to your eyes, of all people—my God! Don't step on me like a little bug in a rug. I'm—so dazed, infinitesimal. And you are so infinitely magnificent—all that a woman should be. I've always thought it. But a while ago I thought you were making fun of me."

"Making fun of you?" Rosa demanded indignantly. "When?"

"That song about the lipping widow. I met such a person. I tried to do her a favor. I hope I did. A kind of Don Quixote chivalry on my part. I thought, maybe, you had earned something of it. I even had an idea you knew all about the incident—the beans, everything. Looking back, I can now see it was all preposterously absurd, a veritable scream in comics. She could never have meant anything, being anything, to me. I know it all along she couldn't. But I was rather an outcast; best, I was humiliated to think what you might be thinking of me, too."

"When was that?"

"Oh, back in Atlanta," said Mr. Bing, irritable in his confusion.

"When I was given the de trop—sick out of a gentleman's club because of my supposed connections with Sawyer. It's like a nightmare, still. I wondered all the time what you were thinking."

"But you didn't take the trouble to find out what I was thinking, did you?"

"How could I? I was about half crazy! I doubt if I could have made myself intelligible if I had tried to explain matters to you."

"You mean, Beverly, you formed just a peevish idea of me as well, and forgot I wasn't like some other people. That I wasn't as worldly, impressionable, light, as they were, on the other side. You forgot that I do my own thinking, and am not easily influenced by what I hear other people say. As for the other you seem to have had some sort of passing affair with the widow you say you tried to do a favor for, I don't care anything about that at all. I am sure you are a gentleman, and always will be a gentleman. It's a mystery to me you haven't fallen in love with some nice person. And why are you angry with me?"

"Angry with you?" He caught hold of her suddenly, his hands gripping her arms, the first time he had ever done such a thing in his life. Nor was he conscious of the fact that she showed no resentment at the little familiarity. "I don't care if you were making fun of me—if you did know about that young widow. And I am not angry with you. In the contrary, you are wonderful. The most wonderful woman I ever knew. But what am I? I've realized it more today than ever. I am not anything—anybody."

"You don't expect me to believe that, do you?" asked Rosa with a disarming curl of her lip.

"Believe? I imagine you would know it. Belief and knowledge are two different things."

"Well, I don't believe it. I think you came here today just to run your self down. I think Ruth thinks so too. If I made fun of you at all, it's dangerous to cross a woman even if it's just running your own self down. She takes an entirely different viewpoint, reads between the lines, and she's always about right in her deductions. You came here purposely to run yourself down, thinking—well, I know what your idea was."

You were positively insulting—more insulting than we were even if we had known about your love affair with some mysterious young widow and were parodying her in a song to hit back at you. Beverly, you are stupid. I'll say that much."

"Worse, I'm a bonehead," he agreed. He said it so solemnly she had to laugh.

"No, you are not a bonehead."

"In a fool."

"No, you're not a fool."

"I'm a driving ass! Don't say I am not a driving ass. Because I am a driving ass! And some day I'll tell you about that widow, Rosa. And then you will know I am a driving ass."

"Come back in and stay a while longer," said Rosa. "Let's don't stand here. We're like the picture of the girl and the young fellow who said good-bye long at the door that the snow came down and down until they were buried to their chins."

"Oh, I've got to go," he ejaculated in alarm.

"No, I see. You're not going to be swept off your feet?"

"Not that either. I've just got to go. It's an engagement—with a man."

"Sawyer?"

Mr. Bing paled.

"Well, go and come back."

"It's generous of you, Rosa, not to ask any more about Sawyer—and—"

"When are you coming back?"

"When I know about those manuscripts. I can do something with those manuscripts—I am going to reform."

"Well, it won't make any difference to me if they are not accepted," said Rosa. "If I like someone, I like them."

"Thanks, Rosa. I can say the same of you. I guess nothing could change me in—that liking. Thanks."

But talking like that, allowing himself to say things like that to her, was making realities of the very things he never wanted to see become realities. He rushed away from her down the hall, towards the elevator, as fast as he could. She had him now. He could never get away from her now. She was too lenient—too forgiving. She was the kind that never turned loose, because it was almost extinction for the man if they did turn loose. They made a man feel bigger and more important than he was. And what was more, she was a reality! She was as real as the earth under his feet.

CHAPTER XVII.

Mr. Bing had at last run from Rosa Bronson as from a fire, but she had made him feel uncommonly chipper in doing it. Radiating alarming thoughts of her followed him all the way back downtown. He had almost forgotten there was such a man as Sawyer. No, he had almost forgotten the scene with that fellow, renegade if there ever was one. And treating Lil as he had. Treating any woman like that! All women were good. That is, they were good, if they were as nice as Rosa. Rosa, of course, was an exception. He had always known she was an exception. If he were a marrying man, she would be the logical woman to whom he would propose. But not being a marrying man, not even wanting to surrender freedom and individuality for the marriage block, he would, of course, never do such a thing. At least, he was sure he would never propose to her until he was satisfied on one point. She had acted innocently enough, but he was still inclined to the idea that Rosa had been actually spoofing him about something, with that Miss Ruth Leavitt's admirable assistance. The song of the lipping widow and those beans were more than a coincidence. But with it all, the nagging suspicion, he believed in her, and felt that she believed in him—that he claimed her sincere friendship and admiration. Now and then he even thought that he could safely claim her love—that had been his desire. Yes, Rosa was a very captivating woman. And, thank God, she had humor. She was a good fellow. And with her humor and good fellowship she was a lady. Those last few minutes with her at the door would be memorable, and he still felt the exhilarating effects of them as if he had taken a strong drink.

Hours later in getting back to Sawyer, he found that fellow pacing his rooms like a caged, maddening tiger. He had been pacing that way since morning, wondering what had become of Mr. Bing. And what a disheveled, dispirited object he was to look at! He had been drinking to excess again, and as a consequence his small, piglike eyes were swollen and bloodshot, with little black rings around them like those of a mad macaw's. His prognathous jaw had evened out a more brilliant tilt, thrusting out like a prize fighter's clenched fist. There was also something very spongey in the droop of his watery-lidded eyes. He was a lady. He presented the figure of an athlete, thick, heavy, massive, big as a gramin, an Hercules in the size of his bone and muscles. Surveying him critically, Mr. Bing thought, what vitality, what an immense waste of energy! What a disproportion of vulgar power! But nature was always that way—she ran to strange, inexplicable favoritisms. Sawyer was a powerful being, physically, and he wasn't regarded him unfavorably. He never had been afraid of Sawyer. For that matter, Mr. Bing had never feared anybody, physically, and he wasn't a fighting man at that. The keenest animal feeling anybody could arouse in him was revulsion—spiritual revulsion. It was only then he was without defense. He was handicapped right from the beginning because of his spiritual sensitiveness, and not because of cowardice. And that was a trait of his was always misunderstood by animal-minded people. Sawyer sometimes forgot and misunderstood Mr. Bing that way until he went too far in his bullying. Then how surprised he was, just like an

Story of The Opera

MONDAY NIGHT: "MARTA"

Opera by Flotow.
(Sung in Italian.)

THE CAST.
Lady Henrietta.....Frances Alda
Nancy.....Kathleen Howard
Lionel.....Beniamino Gigli
Plunkett.....Giuseppe De Luca
Sir Tristan.....Paolo Ananias
The Sheriff.....Louis D'Angelo
A Servant.....Vincenzo Reschiglian
Conductor, Gennaro Papi.

The action of "Marta" takes place during the reign of Anne, a beauty of the court, Lady Henrietta, is prey to ennui, and Nancy, her lively companion, can find no way of distracting her. Lord Tristan, a dandified old nobleman, much smitten by Lady Henrietta's charms, is equally unsuccessful. When all are at a loss what to do, a chorus of servants on their way to Richmond fair is heard, and Lady Henrietta jumps at the idea of going to the fair, too. She tells Nancy to get clothes ready for both of them, and they'll be servants also for the time.

Lord Tristan's sense of decorum is outraged and he loudly protests, but Henrietta pushes aside all his objections and tells him he must dress up as a servant also and accompany her and Nancy. If he loves her and expects any return, he must do so without a murmur, she admonishes. So Tristan at last consents and they add to the old gentleman's discomfort by making him dance in excess of joy.

Act II.

The Richmond fair is in progress. Peasants farmers and servants are in evidence. They come to make their annual engagements. Lionel, a fondling, and his foster brother, Plunkett, a young farmer, come on the scene in search of a couple of servants.

wenches. The sheriff arrives to make his proclamation. All engagements, he declares, shall be for one year, and as soon as money is passed, contracts are binding. The farmers thereupon begin hiring their people, when Henrietta, Nancy and Tristan arrive, dressed in servants' costumes. The two ladies found the situation very jolly, but Sir Tristan is sour, especially when Lionel and Plunkett appear and take interest in his two charges, who readily enough accept the humor of it all.

So Tristan finds himself hustled away, while the young farmers side up to Henrietta and Nancy, and offer them both a situation. They laughingly agree to accept the money offered them. Plunkett then proposes an immediate departure, and they begin to grow alarmed and the feeling increases as Tristan returns and proposes to return home, for Plunkett calls in the sheriff, who decides they must go with their new-made masters and perform they do so.

Act III.

Lady Henrietta and Nancy now enter the humble home of Plunkett, who at once instructs them in their new duties. Henrietta, who says her name is Martha, is quite frightened, but Nancy, who gives the name as Julia, is saucy and obstinate. Lionel, more sympathetic, suggests lighter work and shows them how to spin. But they make a sad mess of it. Plunkett and Nancy go out to see the kitchen. Lionel, alone with Martha, is impressed by her refinement and beauty and quickly finds his heart taking a part in the game. Unconsciously at first, she leads him on to declare he loves her, but she awakens to the incongruity of the position and, though a little affected herself, repulses him. At this juncture Plunkett and Nancy return, quarrelling violently, but midnight sounds and all retire. No sooner are Lionel and Plunkett gone than the two girls return, concerting together how they can escape. At this moment carriage wheels are heard and Sir Tristan appears at the window. He helps them out as the curtain falls.

Act IV.

Thescene shows the park at Richmond and an inn in the foreground where Plunkett is drinking with farmers. Horns are heard and a number of huntresses appear with Nancy. Plunkett recognizes her, and when she denies her identity, insists on taking her with him. But the huntresses drive him off. Lionel enters, melancholy, mad with love, and soon after Lady Henrietta and Tristan. The latter goes after the chase and Henrietta encounters Lionel. He is overjoyed and greets her effusively, but she, covering her confusion, tells him he is mistaken. He pleads, but she denies him. He grows angry and would force her, when she cries for help, and all rush in with Sir Tristan. Lionel claims Henrietta as his servant and insists she shall return with him. Plunkett comes to aid Lionel, but the latter persists until the others take him for a madman. Henrietta implores him to be quiet, but this only angers him the more. He takes a ring from his finger and asks Plunkett to go with it to the queen. She will know who he is. Trumpets sound, recalling the chase, and Lionel is left in despair.

Act V.

This scene is laid at the farmhouse again. Lady Henrietta comes in with Nancy, who pairs off with Plunkett, and has an interview with Lionel, telling him that he has been found to be the lost Earl of Derby. She also offers him her love. But he, in his weakened state, thinks this a new trick and tells her to beware of his fury. Henrietta, before going, tells Plunkett and Nancy to carry out their plan to save Lionel. These two resolve to join hands for good, but first to carry out Lady Henrietta's device.

Scene second is a reproduction of the Richmond fair. Henrietta's retainers play the farmers and servants, and Lady Henrietta and Nancy come in as the two serving girls and Plunkett leads on Lionel. The latter sees Martha again, all come back to him and the story reaches an ingenious but natural close.

BY JULIA FRANCIS WOOD

"I am Shirley Wayne—Colonel Wayne's granddaughter. Four months ago in the courtroom at Springfield I testified falsely. It was during the trial of a burglar who had broken into our house. I said he fired his pistol while he and grandfather were struggling together and that grandfather knocked his hand up so that the shot went into the air. But that isn't so. What really happened is that he fired first into the air—to scare away grandfather—and then grandfather grappled with him. I didn't realize what a difference that would make in law—I was trying to make as much of a hero as I could of grandfather. He was eighty years old the day before, and I wanted to cheer him up. But of course that isn't any excuse. It wasn't the truth, and it has meant seventeen years more in the penitentiary for that burglar. That is the reason I have to tell you. He mustn't serve that—it isn't fair. If there is any way you can keep him from it—without letting my grandfather and grandmother know—for the first time her voice faltered. I wish you would. It is going to be awfully hard on them. I don't care how much you punish me, but if you could just keep it from them—they are very old."

She stopped. Suddenly the room had grown dark. She studied herself desperately against the table. She would not faint—she would not. This one thing at least in her life she would see gallantly through. Slowly the room took shape again. Then she was out once more in the anteroom. She held to rest a moment to get strength to go on, and outside there was a maddening wait for her car. All the little strength that was left in her had concentrated on a frenzied desire to see Ted McAlister. But even that hope was denied her; he was evidently to drive the last drop in her cup of penance. Before she could start her engine he was running down the steps and had vaulted uninvited into the seat beside her.

"This is providential for me," he assured her casually, as if nothing at all had happened. "My car got in a smashup yesterday, and is in the shop. I was so afraid you would get off before I could break away. I had to fix that reporter there, and there is just one of those men—Madison—who has a streak of yellow in him and who might high about this afternoon. I wanted to be sure he understood if he did he would settle with me. I think it is safe now; no one will ever know anything about this afternoon. I pulled with the governor, and I believe you will find he will pardon Cassidy at the end of the two years he ought anyway to serve. Don't worry anymore about it, Shirley. No one—grandfather—grandmother—Elliot—is ever going to know anything about it—and you saved Cassidy."

"Elliot already knows," she said briefly. "I told him."

"You did, did you?" Ted commented in a curious voice.

Out of the vast weariness which was suddenly enveloping her, Shirley tried to find words to think him for his thoughtfulness. All her resentment against him had mysteriously vanished. She might have known Ted would be kind. She remembered irrelevantly the look on his face the day his dog had died; he sat up for two nights nursing it. With a sudden generous impulse she broke the silence which had fallen between them.

"You were right—absolutely right in what you told me that evening. I see it now. Do you remember what you said—if I'd come down off my pedestal I'd understand? Well, I'm off it," she flung out her hands in a sad little gesture, "down in the dust. And I understand."

"Off it," he repeated in a queer, choked voice, wholly unlike Ted's. "Off it! When you are up on it so high—so high—a man has to get down on his knees to worship you."

"I swore I'd never tell you," he went on rapidly, as she sat too dumfounded for speech, "and I know, of course, it is no use; you're going to marry Elliot, and you hate me. But I want you, anyway, to know. I love you, Shirley—have loved you all winter. I've fought it with everything that was in me, because—much as I wanted you—I despised you. I thought there wasn't anything to you, and I hated myself for losing you. I married a real woman—like my mother. That's why I was so bitter that night—I was so furious with myself for caring for you. But now—now—" His voice shook, and Shirley's heart began pounding suddenly in a way Elliot's most eloquent moments had never achieved. "The pluck of you—the magnificent courage! You're your grandfather's girl after all, Shirley—if you knew what it means to a man to be able to look up—high—to the woman he loves."

If any one had even mentioned to Jim Cassidy that he had been instrumental in rescuing a soul from spiritual smugness and in bringing about one of those few matches which are planned in heaven, his remarks would undoubtedly be unprintable. Nevertheless, when any romantic seeking acquaintance asks Ted and Shirley how they first met, they invariably reply, "It was a burglar who first really introduced us."

Jane Hedden Hat Pattern

EDITORIAL.

Many foresighted seamstresses prepare summer tub frocks and sports clothes in the spring time. Long before the outdoor weather arrives they are prepared to enjoy it. There is no staying in the house on golden summer mornings to sew on something to wear in the afternoon.

Among the new style displays are fascinating hats made to match the crisp organdie, gingham, linen and crepe summer dresses. The prettiest ones are of vividly smart sport shades or beautifully blended pastel shades. The hand-work which makes lovely the most expensive ones is work which any home woman can do if she but take the time and the pains to do as directed.

Every well dressed woman is aware that no street hat is ever quite as smart as a clever bow hat. For this type of hat the design is the thing. The proportions of the hat and the style and size of the bow must be perfectly suited one to the other. An inch too much or too little will spoil the bow. All this has been worked out in model 2335 and given in the pattern which is furnished our readers.

BEAUTY CHATS

A WELL KEPT NECK. The appearance of the neck is much more important than one realizes. Most women feel that they have done their job as regards beauty when they have massaged their faces with cold cream. Yet if the neck is old and wrinkled it will give an age even to the youngest face, whereas if it is well kept, firm and young looking, it will be a great asset to a woman's youth and good looks. The lines of the neck, too, count extraordinarily.

to the back of the neck. Now the line from the hair down the back should be slim and graceful and should not be broken either by too much flesh or by a protruding bone. The flesh of the neck. An osteopath or good masseur can put the protruding bone back into place, you yourself can get rid of the lump of flesh by massaging it vigorously, and if you are too fat, by dieting.

Massage of the neck is always easy. A simple rotary motion with the fingertips will do very well. Cold cream should be cleansing if the skin is brown or grimy looking, flesh building if the skin is oily or wrinkled. If it is very bad indeed I can advise nothing better than a cold cream neck, for which you first scrub the neck thoroughly with a complexion brush, soap and hot water, rinse with hot water, and then rub the neck thoroughly with cold cream or with cocoa butter, bandaging loosely with long strips of muslin in order to hold the cream against the skin. This, like most beauty treatments, is best done at night. A five-minute ice rub a day will do wonders in keeping the neck young.

Josephine—Soaps made for family purposes are too severe to use on the face; even hands that are constantly immersed in soapy water become impaired, and only good treatment with creams will counteract this abuse. A fine soap costs so little that you should not resort to soaps having caustic properties for use on the face.

Blond—Very few people have their eyebrows shaped any more by extracting hairs. You can keep them becomingly arched, however, by the way you train the hairs to lie in place. If the hair is below the arch, brush it up and into the line; and the same when hair grows the other way. Then, with finger tips, pinch into place.

Tomorrow—Answers to Letters.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

The Half-Time Wife

BY VIOLET DARE

CHAPTER XIX.

In Passing.

Suzanne had not been on horseback since her marriage, until that morning when she went with Hale. She had always loved riding, and the horse he had selected for her was perfectly suited. She cried out delightedly as it broke from a trot into a gallop when they reached the open stretch of road near the river.

"Oh, this is marvelous, Duncan!" she exclaimed. "I haven't had so much fun in ages and ages."

"It's the kind of fun we used to have together, isn't it?" he answered. "Remember those long rides we used to take when I was on leave? And the time your horse ran away, and I caught you?"

"Yes, of course!" She broke off suddenly; would she ever forget that misty spring day, and the hideous fear that had gripped her as she realized that her horse would not obey her. He had gone tearing down the road, straight toward a corner where the road crossed a small bridge. She was sure he would not make the turn, but would plunge over the cliff at the end.

And Duncan had come racing after her, and caught her horse's bridle just before they reached the turn, swinging him round almost straight into the high bank at the roadside. She trembled when she thought of it. Another memory came hard on its heels—the memory of the moment after, when she had slipped to the ground, and he had stood beside her, holding her close to him until she could recover enough from her fright to stand. And then he had told her that he loved her. And after that, how many wonderful moments there had been!

She glanced up at him now, wondering if that memory had come to him, too. People said that men forgot things like that, and many things had happened since that misty May morning. He turned and smiled down at her—and she knew that he had not forgotten.

"Isn't the view beautiful here?" she exclaimed, trying hastily to make conversation. "When I first came from the library; she hurried into the room, to see him standing beside Mrs. Haynes. They turned and broke off their conversation abruptly as she entered.

"Hello, dear," he exclaimed, and as she ran to him put one arm around her. "Glad you got back; I've got to rush off to the office at once; just came home to change my clothes. I'll be on my way now, and leave you to talk with Mrs. Haynes."

"But, Geoff—Geoff dear—" she stared after him in bewilderment, as he crossed the room. How could he hurry away like that? Didn't he want to see her?

She turned in time to see a skeptical little smile cross the older woman's face.

Tomorrow—Defiance.

No Insurance—$2,000 Loss

Failure to take advantage of an economic protective possibility results in dead loss.

Families at Lyons, Ga., last week suffered such a loss of $3,000 when two people, father and son, died as the results of injuries sustained when the automobile in which they were riding turned turtle.

The greatest economic protective offers ever extended to the public are proffered by The Constitution in its $500 Group Reader Life Insurance offer and $1,000 Travel and Pedestrian Accident Insurance offer.

The $500 life insurance is offered for 15 or 20 cents per week, depending upon the risk. It is the only straight life insurance offer by any Atlanta newspaper, and it is as efficient as it is economic.

Under the travel and pedestrian accident offer $1 per year in addition to the annual subscription cost of the daily and Sunday Constitution protects one to the extent of $1,000 against death in certain specified accidents; provision is made for payment of serious sums for injuries, and for $10 weekly indemnity for disability.

A phone call, a visit or a letter to The Constitution's insurance department will bring you full information on either or both of these great offers.

Millionaire's Ex-Wife Wants To Wed Accused Lover in Jail

HELEN MARIE PATTERSON.

Paris, April 20.—Because she loves him so, Helen Marie Patterson wants to wed her accused lover in jail.

Helen Marie used to be the wife of Otto Young Heyworth, heir to $20,000,000. She was a beautiful young actress struggling for stardom, and he a lanky youth just returned from war, met at a tea in Chicago. (She moved on to Atlantic City and he followed her. They were married six months after their first meeting.)

Soon they separated, then they were divorced. He was too temperamental, and so was she. He was cruel, too, she said; once he burned a hole in her negligee. She was given a settlement of $45,000 and fled away to Paris. Followed days and days of any life. At a New Year's party she fell through the third floor window of a hotel.

Convincing in the hospital, she met Harry Hussey. He showered her with flowers and letters of love. "I love you Harry," she learned to tell him. They were happy — at least she was—in the thought that she would soon be married to him. She was going to forget her former unhappy venture on the marital seas then.

The Paris police arrested Hussey. He was, they said, really "Rats" Tourbillon. "He's an international crook," they tried to explain to Helen Marie. "He's wanted in New York in connection with a $80,000 robbery. She refused to believe the charges and is preparing to wed Hussey, in jail if necessary.

YOUTH IS ARRESTED IN PIERCE SLAYING

Pocahontas, Ark., April 20.—Rufus Persful, aged 20, was arrested today in connection with the killing of William Pierce, farmer, whose body, pierced by two bullets, was found on the Frisco railroad tracks near here Friday night. Persful will be given a preliminary hearing Monday before J. W. Shannon, mayor, acting as justice of the peace. Mayor Shannon swore out the warrant for Persful's arrest after several persons had claimed to have seen the youth Friday night going in the direction of the spot where Pierce's body was later found. No motive for the killing has been disclosed.

MOTHER SNUGGLE'S CONTEST FOR SEASON PASSES to the Howard Theater

How to Win Passes

IN this new contest put on by Mother Snuggle you don't have to color any pictures or anything like that. All you have to do is to write at the top of a sheet of paper the sentence, "Harold Lloyd's Latest and Best Comedy Is 'Girl Shy,'" and then write down underneath it all the words you can make of the letters in that sentence.

You ought to be able to make hundreds of words out of the letters in that sentence. Look at it here: "HAROLD LLOYD'S LATEST AND BEST COMEDY IS 'GIRL SHY.'" Now just think how many words you can make of all the letters there are in it.

When you have finished your list of words, sign your name, classification and address and mail to "Snuggle Contest, Howard Theater, Atlanta, Ga."

THREE CLASSES—When we say put your classification after your name it means that you must write after your name whether you are an ADULT, HIGH SCHOOL PUPIL or GRAMMAR SCHOOL PUPIL. Be sure to write which you are, for if you don't your answer can't be considered.

HERE'S the reason: Three separate sets of prizes will be given. One set will be awarded to ADULTS, another will be given to HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS and the third will be given to GRAMMAR SCHOOL PUPILS.
